'The Milky Way with Shooting Stars' —by Cindy Ripley

Time to Go

Harvest moon auspicious glow,
Begets cold snap on tiptoe.
Bemused by Milky Way haze,
One last shooting star to gaze.

Blustery north winds influx,
Escorts autumn equinox.
Water engulfs chilly air,
Woeful mist departs with care.

Loons tremolo, wail and hoot,
Dozens gather to commute.
Flight rehearsals become swift,
Paltry feathers left adrift.

Foliage renders new hues,
Kaleidoscope views ensue.
Rouge few release fervent grip,
Wafting down, a final dip.

Boats perched on trailers await,
Winter months they hibernate.
Docks lay terra firma bound,
Floating memories resound.

Cabins locked and boarded up,
Daylight hugs the mountain top.
Quell within a looming cry,
Flying Pond we say goodbye.
